PART III-NARRATIVE

BioTime has filed its annual report on Form 10-K for the year ended December 31, 2002 without the financial statements, management's discussion and analysis of financial condition and results of operations, and the reports and consents of its independent accountants because those items could not be obtained in time for filing without unreasonable effort or expense for the reasons discussed below.

During January 2003, BioTime, Inc. changed independent accountants, dismissing Deloitte & Touche LLP ("Deloitte") and engaging BDO Seidman, LLP ("BDO"). As a result, this is the first audit conducted by BDO who had to become familiar with BioTime's business and accounting records, had to analyze accounting issues as they pertain to BioTime's business and operations, and had to review financial statements, accounting information, contracts and other documentation of BioTime's operations for prior periods, all for the first time, in order to plan and conduct its audit, conduct the reviews required by BDO's audit procedures, and issue a report on BioTime's financial statements. Because this was the first audit by BDO it was necessary for their review and verification to be more extensive for this accounting period than might have been the case had they conducted audits for prior periods and reviewed the pertinent accounting data and documentation at that time. As a result it was necessary for BioTime to assemble and provide BDO with extensive documentation.

In addition, BioTime's financial statements are impacted by its obligations under debentures and warrants issued during a prior accounting period, that were not previously audited by BDO. As part of its audit procedures, BDO required BioTime to obtain from third parties confirmations of BioTime's financial or contractual obligations to them under those debentures and options. BioTime had to wait for those third parties to reply to BioTime's requests.

BioTime has only seven full time employees and has limited financial resources, as disclosed in its Form 10-K. Most significantly, BioTime out-sources its accounting functions and does not have full time accounting personnel. While BioTime previously has been able to timely file all reports required of it under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended, using out-sourced accounting personnel and its in-house management and administrative personnel, it was not able to meet the filing deadlines for its Form 10-K for the year ended

December 31, 2002 because of the additional burdens associated with providing documentation and other information to a new auditor. In addition, management time was being devoted to the negotiation of an over-seas product licensing agreement that was signed on March 27, 2003, as disclosed in the Form 10-K. The delays resulting from these burdens could not be eliminated by BioTime without unreasonable effort or expense.

Because the Form 10-K must also contain a report of the independent accountants who audited BioTime's financial statements for the fiscal years ended December 31, 2000 and 2001, it was necessary for Deloitte to review BioTime's Form 10-K as well and to verify that the results of the audit of the year ended December 31, 2002 would not impact their report for the prior periods. The need to obtain reports from both Deloitte and BDO caused delays that would not have arisen had only one firm of independent accountants been involved.
